Summary

According to data on the EU's Eur-Lex database, there are at present around 19,000 EU legislative acts in force. These are mainly directives, regulations, decisions and external agreements, but they include a range of other instruments. As Commons Briefing Paper Legislating for Brexit: the Great Repeal Bill, CBP7793, 21 November 2016, explains, a major issue for Brexit is what to do about EU legislation that has been incorporated into UK law.

Section 2\(2\) of the European Communities Act 1972 (ECA) provides a power for subordinate legislation to be made where the EU Treaties require Member States to make provisions in their domestic law, such as for the implementation of EU directives. It also provides that other powers to adopt subordinate legislation in other Acts are interpreted as enabling them to be used to implement EU law.

Most EU directives and a small number of EU regulations and decisions are implemented in the UK by SI under the authority of the ECA - the majority - or another enabling Act.

Some EU directives are implemented by primary legislation (Act of Parliament). These will be examined in a separate briefing paper.

Repealing the ECA will have the effect of rendering the law as if the repealed Act had never existed, which would mean that secondary legislation made under the ECA (but not under other enabling Acts) would no longer be legally valid on Brexit day.

Although the aim of the Government's proposed Great Repeal Bill is to legislate to leave the EU, for practical reasons and to avoid legal gaps, the Government has said the Bill will "convert" EU law into UK law where it is practical. The Government and Parliament will then decide whether to repeal, amend or keep them. It is not yet clear what role Parliament will have in such a process.

The ECA applies to the whole of the UK and to different degrees in Gibraltar and the Crown Dependencies. Under the Devolution Statutes the devolved authorities may observe, transpose and implement EU law, and are obliged not to legislate or act in a way that is contrary to EU law. Brexit means they too will need to address the matter of EU-derived laws.

Briefing Paper 7863, Legislating for Brexit: directly applicable EU law, 12 January 2017, looks at EU regulations, which will cease to have effect in the UK if the ECA is simply repealed without a saving provision, pending decisions on their future status.

Briefing Paper 7850, Legislating for Brexit: EU external agreements, 5 January 2017, looks at the EU's external agreements, stating whether they are exclusive EU competence or mixed competence agreements.

1. Introduction

According to the EU's Eur-Lex database, there are at present around 19,000 EU legislative acts in force. These are mainly directives, regulations, decisions and external agreements, but they include other instruments, such as resolutions, reports, rules of procedure, guidelines, declarations, inter-institutional and internal agreements, programmes, opinions, communications, conclusions and statutes.

Many of these instruments, mainly EU directives, are implemented in the UK by delegated legislation.<sup>1</sup> The Appendix to this paper lists around 7,900 Statutory Instruments which have implemented EU legislation.

The European Communities Act 1972 (ECA) gives effect to the UK's obligations and duties under the EC/EU Treaties in national law. It "defines the legal relationship between the two otherwise separate spheres of law, and without it EU law could not become part of national law".<sup>2</sup>

The ECA gives Ministers broad powers to make subordinate legislation to give effect to legal rights and obligations arising from EU membership. Under section 2(2) ECA Ministers can by secondary legislation do "anything that could be done by an Act of Parliament",<sup>3</sup> but without going through the full parliamentary legislative process.

Directly applicable EU Treaty obligations and EU regulations enter into force in the UK by virtue of the ECA without needing further implementation. EU directives on the other hand are mostly implemented by secondary legislation (Statutory Instruments) and sometimes by primary legislation (Acts of Parliament).

The Government intends to introduce a "Great Repeal Bill" in the next Queen's Speech, which, if passed, will repeal the ECA and make provision for the EU acquis – the body of existing EU law and obligations - to be "converted" into UK law "wherever practical".<sup>4</sup> The Government (and Parliament?) will then decide which EU acts to keep, repeal or modify, depending on the UK's new relationship with the EU. It is not yet clear what role Parliament will have in this process.

The distinction between directly applicable EU law and EU law that has been implemented by primary or secondary legislation will have implications for the process of legislating for Brexit.

Section 2\(1\) ECA: all rights, powers, liabilities, obligations and restrictions "from time to time created or arising by or under the Treaties" have legal effect in the UK.

Section 2\(2\) ECA: power for subordinate legislation to be made where EU Treaties require Member States to make provisions in domestic law, e.g. for implementation of directives; other powers to adopt subordinate legislation in other Acts are interpreted as enabling them to be used to implement EU obligations.

<sup>1</sup> "Delegated or secondary legislation is usually concerned with detailed changes to the law made under powers from an existing Act of Parliament. Statutory instruments form the majority of delegated legislation but it can also include Rules or Codes of Practice", UK Parliament website, delegated legislation.

2. EU law in the UK

Most EU directives and a small number of EU regulations and decisions are implemented in the UK by Statutory Instrument (SI) under Section 2(2) of the ECA. Some EU measures are implemented by Acts of Parliament and some by administrative regulations. A few don't need any implementation because they are already covered by existing UK measures.

2.1 How are SIs to implement EU laws adopted?

The ECA does not specify whether EU-related SIs should be adopted under the negative or the affirmative procedure.<sup>5</sup> This means that regulations under section 2(2) ECA can be combined with regulations made under powers in other enabling Acts. The latter may provide for either negative or affirmative procedure and the ECA allows section 2(2) SIs to be made using the procedure which applies under the other Act.

The vast majority of EU-related SIs (estimated at 90%)<sup>6</sup> are laid subject to the negative procedure. This means they automatically become law without debate unless there is an objection from either House.

A few are laid subject to affirmative procedure, which requires the formal approval of both Houses of Parliament before they become law. For example, the Community Drivers Hours and Recording Equipment \(Amendment\) Regulations 1998, which implemented EU rules on the use of tachographs, was laid subject to the affirmative procedure. SIs to implement subsequent amendments to the EU rules in 2007, 2008, 2015 and 2016 were also subject to affirmative procedure.

The Government's Transposition Notes (TNs) show how the main elements of an EU directive have been, or will be, transposed into UK law. A TN should set out in table form how each article of a directive has been transposed into domestic law.<sup>7</sup> TNs are published on departmental websites, usually in accordance with the general guidance.<sup>8</sup>

<sup>7</sup> See, for example, the table for the transposition of Directive 2006/25/EC on the minimum health and safety requirements regarding the exposure of workers to risks arising from physical agents (artificial optical radiation), the by the Control of Artificial Optical Radiation at Work Regulations 2010, on the Health and Safety Executive website.

2.1 Do the devolved Administrations adopt EU law?

The ECA applies to the whole of the UK. EU regulations become law directly in all four UK nations (and in the Crown Dependencies and Gibraltar to the extent that the Treaties apply). Directives must be implemented as necessary.

Under the Devolution Statutes the devolved bodies have concurrent power (shared with the UK Government) to observe, transpose and implement EU law. Section 53 of the Scotland Act 1998 provides for the transfer to Scottish Ministers of functions in relation to observing and implementing EU obligations in areas within the devolved legislative competence of the Scottish Parliament.<sup>9</sup> They must not legislate or act in a way that is contrary to EU law or in reserved matters.

Under the Northern Ireland Act 1998 and the Government of Wales Act 2006, the legislative framework for Northern Ireland and Wales to implement EU law is similar to that of Scotland.

2.2 Where can I find EU-related SIs?

There are several sources of EU-related Statutory Instruments. Some are not comprehensive or do not go back as far as UK entry to the EEC in 1973. Some databases are subscription only, but the Government and Parliament websites are open access. Some useful sources are:

- Halsbury's EU Legislation Implementator (England and Wales)
- LexisNexis EU Tracker (England and Wales)

3. Appendix List of SIs

Notes on the list

Source

The SIs listed below have been collated from the Legislation.gov.uk website as on 9 December 2016. The list is not guaranteed to be exhaustive.

Exclusions

The list excludes European Communities Designation Orders which do not implement EU law but designate which Ministers and Government Departments may exercise powers to make orders conferred by section 2(2) ECA. Other Designation Orders, such as those on port security and those designating areas of environmental sensitivity, are included.

SIs of the Devolved Legislatures are not included.

Authority of the ECA and other UK Acts

The list shows, in reverse chronological order, SIs made explicitly under the ECA and those made under the authority of other Acts. Sometimes both the ECA and another Act are 'parent' Acts.

In many cases, where the ECA is not explicitly mentioned, its authority is implied by the phrase: "in exercise of the powers conferred [on UK ministers] by [a UK Act] and of all other powers enabling them in that behalf".

SIs which revoke earlier SIs

In many cases SIs update, amend and/or supersede earlier SIs on the same subject. For example, the Motor Vehicles \(Compulsory Insurance\) Regulations 2016 update the minimum level of compulsory motor insurance for property damage required under Article 9 of EU Directive 2009/103/EC. Article 9(2) of this directive provides for the minimum level to be reviewed in line with the European Index of Consumer Prices every five years and adjusted accordingly. The 2016 Regulations replaces 2007 Regulations, which are revoked.

The list includes all such UK SIs, not just the most recent ones.

References to ECA

Included in the ECA list are SIs which, although not made under the ECA, refer to the ECA as the source of an EU right, obligation or definition. For example, the Referral of Proposed Marriages and Civil Partnerships Regulations 2015 refer to the status of "Permanent residence" as an enforceable EU right under section 2(2) ECA.

SIs applicable to Wales

SIs applicable to Wales are listed here only in the English language version, but the Government website lists them in both English and Welsh.

About the Library

The House of Commons Library research service provides MPs and their staff with the impartial briefing and evidence base they need to do their work in scrutinising Government, proposing legislation, and supporting constituents.

As well as providing MPs with a confidential service we publish open briefing papers, which are available on the Parliament website.

Every effort is made to ensure that the information contained in these publicly available research briefings is correct at the time of publication. Readers should be aware however that briefings are not necessarily updated or otherwise amended to reflect subsequent changes.
